SPRING HOUSECLEANING. Don't Commence Too Early, Mrs. Fred G. Orne.

The first warm days usually stirs the housewife to thoughts of spring house cleaning, so let me give a little advice. The majority of women clean house too early in the spring. There would be no harm in doing it early if it did not entail the necessity of taking down stoves, putting away fors, heavy underwear, winter blankets and comforts. Then when the usual late cold snap comes, the family must either shiver for a week or ten days, with a result ant cold, or all the winter garments, redolent of camphor and moth-balls, must be dragged out again, thus making a deal of extra work. Unless you live in the far South postpone your regular cleaning until after the May frost and confine yourself to cleaning the attie and cellar, and the sorting over contents of closets, bureau drawers, boxes, trunks, bags, and every receptacle of stored things. Put into your regular weekly washing, curtains, tidies, conterpieces, bureau scarfs, etc. A few each week will not seem much but it will count when cleaning time comes. Iron and put away. In cleaning windows I find that a mixture of kerosene and water, a tablespoonful of kerosene to one quart of water is an excellent one. I find that a soft cloth, slightly moistened in water is more satisfactory than a dry duster as it takes all the dust, and does not injure the furniture if you are careful to get it quite dry. It takes but a moment to wash it out and there is no reason why they should not take all the dust in cleaning rather than brush it into the air to settle somewhere else. Let this be the time to get rid of all old rubbish, broken dishes you intend to mend sometime, by and by. Pieces for quilts get rid of unless you have a member in the family devoted to patchwork. When one can buy new articles so chenp, it does not pay to have so much old rubbish around.

> Work Systematically, Edna J. Merritt.

bait should be started as soon as the corn begins to appear above the ground so that the cutworms may be climinat. specific with ed as quickly as possible and the in jured hills promptly replanted. During the warmer spring months cutworms do most of their feeding at night and burrow into the soil to the depth of an inch or two during the day, so that the bait will usually be more effective if applied during the late afternoon or early evening hours.

Frequently cutworms migrate to cultivated fields from adjoining grassland, and in such cases the crops can be pro tected by running a narrow band of the poisoned bait around the edge of the field or along the side nearest the source of infestation.

GROWING SMALL FRUITS AS A BUSINESS.

E. F. Hitchings, Associate Professor of Horticulture, in Farmers' Week Course.

Maine offers every opportunity for the growing of small fruits commer cially. The outlook was never better, and the field is not restricted to a few more favored localities. Markets are good and have never been fully supplied. A first class articles is always in demand at a price that will return

Advantages: Her advantages are many, A long extent of sea coast, where transportation is of the best, railroad and trolley lines connecting with same. or supplying through lines to the best of markets. A yearly increasing number of summer visitors who come to enjoy our many products,

Where to locate: The first question then to consider is location. In deciding this question the following factors should be taken into consideration: First investigate the present supply of the location desired to see if it is sufficient. Certain sections may be abundantly supplied by local growers so that any addition would cause a surplus or glut the market. Second, consider the question of adaptable land at a reasonable price, labor problems with sufscient holp at the critical period, transportation facilities, both nearby and to distant markets, providing the home market should prove inadequate. If the demand is greater than the supply, and other factors are favorable, then the choice of a location can easily be Soveral of the farmers are doing adequate return for the labor of growing thom.

Thorough preparation of the ground is most essential for the comfort of the plant. A warm, mellow seed bed fitting softly and enogly about the seeds gives the soil moisture opportunity to start seed growth at once. The better the seed bed the better the crop. The sced bed furnishes food and water for the plant. A deep reservoir of soil rich in plant food and well supplied with air and water is a determining factor of crop production the farmer may control.

WHAT THE STATE HIGHWAY BOARD ACCOMPLISHED.

Chief Engineer Paul D. Sargent Tells of Work in Past Two Years.

What the Maine State Highway Department Has Accomplished During the Past Two Years was the subject of "He Is Risen," made the final appeal an interesting address delivered by to the spirit of belief which will make Paul D. Sargont, chief engineer of the this Easter the most beautiful one, to Maine State Highway Department, at many souls, in which our Church has the annual meeting of the Maine Automobile Association held at Portland. In part Mr. Sargent said: The first thing of importance accomplished by the State Highway Commission during its two years and a half existence was the laying out of a comof road. This is five per cent of the partment for the construction and entire road mileage of the State.

Statistics enrefully compiled show that in the cities and towns on this yels of the expenditures of the State me with shelter; a clean, dry bed and 1,300 miles are found 73 per cent of Highway Commission, you will see a stall wide enough for me to lie down the entire population of the State and that during the two years 1914-1915 the in in comfort.
